

Maxine Fassberg

Executive in Residence

Intel Vice President, Intel Capital

Maxine Fassberg is a Vice President of Intel Corporation and was the general manager of Intel Israel 2007-2017. Previously she was also the plant manager of Fab 28 at Intel Corporation. She was responsible for manufacturing operations, including planning, product output and cost effectiveness for Intel's manufacturing facility in Qiryat Gat, Israel. She joined Intel in 1983.

Maxine has held numerous positions at Intel, including Lithography engineer in the Fab 8 startup in 1983, she was part of Portland Technology Development (1991-2) where she was awarded a patent for the original Polyimide process. Engineering manager of Fab 18 from its inception in December 1995 and from 2000 to 2004 she was the Fab 18 Factory Manager and then plant manager responsible for Fab 28 start-up. Under her leadership Fab28 won Intel's Quality Award (IQA) for 22nm ramp. She has also received two Intel Achievement Awards in connection with inter-die electric material problem resolution.

Maxine was inducted into the Women in Technology International (WITI) Hall of Fame in June 2009 for her passionate contributions and commitment which enable and encourage other technical women to advance in their careers. Amongst other many prizes she was awarded with the Israel Industry Award for 2011 by the Manufacturers Association of Israel and the prestigious Hugo Ramniceanu Prize in Economics for 2012, and was identified as one of the 10 most powerful women in tech in April 2012 as published by CNN.

In 2014 she was honored among 14 other Israeli women leaders in various areas, to light the Independence Day torch in the Israel national Independence Day ceremony.

Maxine received a Master's degree in Applied Chemistry from The Hebrew University of Jerusalem in 1978. She has been engaged in many activities directed towards enhancing Intel's brand and proliferating Intel values in the community. As such, she sat on the Managerial Committee of the Bank of Israel and sits on the Board of Directors of The Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

